Meet a fashion designer, record-holding mountain climber, top chef and pundit who aren't too cool for school

CECILIA CASSINI

Fashion Designer, Age 11

Let the other sixth graders run around during recess. Cecilia Cassini would rather finish her homework in the library, so after school "I can come home, turn on some Lady Gaga and just sew away," says the Los Angeles designer, who counts Miley Cyrus and Brooke Shields as celeb fans of her colorful collections, which retail from $65 to $155 at Fred Segal.

Since she was 4, "she liked to cut and redecorate her clothes," says her mom, Michelle, 42, a yoga teacher. Adds Cecilia: "They were my mom's, sister's [Annabelle, 16] and mine. I'm not sure if they knew I was cutting up their clothes!" Tired of using ponytail holders to tie back her homemade designs so they fit, Cassini asked for a sewing machine for her sixth birthday, which she now uses to create dresses and accessories with her signature touch: "I have to have a bow on everything!"
